Edgar Allen, Founder of Easterseals

The Dementia Clinic is a specialized program within our Neuropsychology and Medical Rehabilitation Department at our Windsor location. This Clinic is designed to aid in the evaluation and diagnosis of dementia, document possible changes in functioning, assist in developing a treatment plan, and provide resources to individuals, families, and caregivers.

The Dementia Clinic was created to allow individuals with concern of a progressive dementia to be evaluated sooner and receive diagnostic clarification, recommendations, and treatment for this debilitating disease in a timely fashion.

Individuals seen in the Dementia Clinic will undergo a focused neuropsychological evaluation used to help gauge a person's level of functioning in cognitive domains, such as memory, attention, language, judgment, and problem-solving. Neuropsychological evaluations are non-invasive and involve administration of a variety of mental tasks, most of which are completed while sitting at a table/desk. The evaluation also involves a clinical interview with the individual, family members, and/or other caregivers. The evaluations typically take about three hours. Results and recommendations will be reviewed with the individual and/or family, and a written report will be supplied to the referring provider.

Referring to the Dementia Clinic

To make a referral to the Dementia Clinic, providers should fax a completed referral form specifically requesting the Dementia Clinic along with the following relevant medical information, including current ICD-10 diagnoses, and below as applicable:

- Concerns regarding the patient's functioning

- Neuroimaging History
- Blood work (recent) ruling out any vitamin deficiencies, infections or chemical imbalances

What if I/my patient does not have a dementia such as Alzheimer's, but is still struggling with memory loss?

Individuals who do not have a progressive dementia, but are experiencing memory and/or other cognitive problems can be referred for a comprehensive evaluation through our general Neuropsychological Department. Please contact 860-270-0600 for more information.
